Pindaric Ode

ON THE

ACCESSION

OF

His Sacred Majesties

KING WILLIAM

AND

QUEEN MARY.

A

Pindarick ODE,

ON

New-Year's-Day, &c.

I.

BEHOLD, how all the Stars give way;
Behold, how the Revolving Sphere,
Swells to bring forth the Sacred Day;
That uſhers in the Mighty Year;
Whilſt Janus with his double Face
Viewing the preſent Time and paſt,
In ſtrong Prophetick Fury ſings,
Our Nations Glory and our King's.

II.

See England's Genius, like the dazling Sun,
Proud of his Race, to our Horizon run
To welcome that Cœleſtial Power,
That of this Glorious Year begins the Happy Hour:
A Year from whence ſhall Wonders come;
A Year to baſle France and Rome,
And bound the dubious Fate of Warring Chriſtendom.

III.

Move on with Fame, all ye Triumphant Days,
To Britain's Honour, and to Cæſar's Praiſe;
Let no ſhort Hour of this Year's bounded Time,
Paſs by without ſome Act ſublime:
Great WILLIAM, Champion of the Mighty States,
And all the Princes the Confederates:

Ploughs the Green Neptune, whilſt to waft Him o'er,
The Fates ſtand ſmiling on the Belgick Shoar:
And now the Gallick Genius Trembles,
How e'er ſhe Pannick Fear diſſembles;
To know the Mighty League, and view the Mighty Pow'r,
So when the Perſian Pride of old,
Diſdain'd their God the Sun,
With Armies, and more powerful Gold,
Did half the World o'er run,
Brave Alexander chang'd their Scorn to Awe,
And Came, and Fought, and Conquer'd like NASSAU.

IV.

Then welcome Wondrous Year,
More Happy and Serene,
Then any ever did appear,
To bleſs Great Cæſar and his Queen:
May every Hour encreaſe their Fames;
Whilſt Ecchoing Skies reſound their Names.
And when Unbounded Joy, and the Exceſs
Of all that can be found in Humane Bliſs,
Fall on 'em, may each Year be ſtill like this,
Health, Fortune, Grandeur, Fame, and Victory,
And Crowning all, a Life, long as Eternity.

CHORUS.

Come ye Sons of Great Apollo,
Let your charming Conſorts follow;
Sing of Triumph, ſing of Beauty,
Sing ſoft Ayres of Loyal Duty;
Give to Cæſar's Royal Fair
Songs of Joy to Calm her Care;
Bid the leſs Auſpicious Year Adieu,
And give her joyful Welcomes to the New.
